

Dr. Marta Morgado

Marta Morgado is a deaf researcher from Portugal. She was a teacher of the deaf at the largest deaf school in Portugal for 21 years before her PhD. She did her PhD at Leiden University in the Netherlands on West African sign languages. She has been working on the SignMorph project, led by Adam Schembri, at the University of Birmingham since 2023. Her current study is on the impact of International Sign on Portuguese Sign Language, how deaf people are interacting more and more virtually than in face-to-face and within an international context, through social networks and online video games.
