Are the Geneva Conventions hopelessly outdated, since in today's armed conflicts that include fighting terrorism it is not possible for a State's legal authority to distinguish combatants from civilians? Analyze and suggest solutions.

Should a new human right be recognized: the right to connect to the internet. Analyze the need, considering the existing human rights that are protected based on the European Convention on Human Rights, Article 10 (which protects the right to send and receive information).

Should a new human right be recognized: the right to credit? Analyze the need and opportunities, considering that some argue that today it is not possible for the average person and family in a developed society to cope (to buy a home or car, providing children with a university education, etc.) without taking out a loan.

Should the prohibition on blinding laser weapons be reconsidered, considering that curbing an enemy's soldiers from participating in the armed conflict in this manner is still less violent to individuals than killing them with bullets or bombs? (Assertion: it is actually a more humane solution to use blinding laser weapons)

Issues related to the fight against modern piracy on the high seas. (The capture and arrest of pirates, trying them in courts or tribunals, punishment.) What are the possibilities of using the Law of the Sea Tribunal created by the 1982 Law of the Sea Convention, to bring pirates to justice before courts?

The developing cooperation and ties between pirates and terrorists in the financing of terrorism. Analyze the possibilities of preventing and inhibiting this cooperation by drafting and adopting new international conventions and agreements.

Is the Constitution of the Republic of Estonia internally inconsistent, considering that the so-called addition or supplement that was adopted by a general referendum substantively provides, in advance, that all kinds of European Union regulations and directives that have been adopted and will be adopted in the future will supersede even the Estonian constitution, without even knowing in advance what any new regulations, laws or directives may contain. Analyze and offer solutions.
